About the Examination Committees

It is with great pride that we list the names of the biomedical scientists, educators, and clinicians who served on NBME and USMLE committees in 2018. NBME, and the profession and public served by the USMLE, are indebted to these volunteers who contribute their expertise and energy to the creation of a national licensing examination system that is without equal.

The USMLE program continues to devote considerable effort to ensure that test committee members represent the content areas required for medical practice as well as the realities of clinical practice. As a result, those USMLE test committee members constitute a “national faculty” of medicine drawn from medical schools and clinical practice settings across the United States. Information about their orientation and training is available in the 2018 NBME Annual Report: Engagement and Action.

In 2018, 46 percent of USMLE committee members were women. Minority racial/ethnic groups comprise 19 percent of members. Sixty-five percent held a medical degree, 28 percent both a medical doctor degree and another advanced degree, and 6 percent held the PHD degree alone. A small number held degrees in nursing, pharmacology, or other related fields. In terms of geographic distribution, 36 percent were from the South, 24 percent from the Midwest, 25 percent from the Northeast, and 15 percent from the West. Three percent of the committee members were either current or former members of state licensing boards. Over the past 10 years, virtually all Liaison Committee on Medical Education–accredited medical schools in the United States have been represented on committees supporting USMLE.

USMLE TEST COMMITTEE MEMBERS PRACTICE AND TEACH IN EVERY REGION OF THE UNITED STATES.

In 2018, committee members came from almost every state.

KEY: In the map above, the number of committee members residing in each state is indicated by color gradation (no shading represents no committee members; darkest shading represents the largest number of committee members). Included in this count are members of the USMLE Management Committee, USMLE test material development committees and task forces, and USMLE interdisciplinary review committees.
