

Working at NBME

On-screen: [What do you like about working at NBME?

Ravi Pandian, Vice President, Operations Management, NBME.]

Rave: It's the people. I got to see really longstanding, high functioning, positive cross unit relationships. I witnessed it as a newbie and in time I grew to feel accepted and a part of kind of that collective group.

Leila: Knowing that there's a direct impact in the work that I do every day makes those challenges and obstacles that we often encounter in our daily work that much more meaningful because we know that there is a direct impact, um, to our partners and to our community in the greater society.

On-screen: [Francis O'Donnell, Senior Psychometrician, NBME.]

Francis: I love the research. Uh, I also love hearing from the people who actually use our exams, so medical school, faculty, students. Every time I talk to them, I get a little more insight into how what we do helps them and ways we can do better.

On-screen: [Joshua Demaree, Senior Editor, NBME.]

Joshua: Easily the best part of my day is collaborating with all of the colleagues here at NBME, whether it's just that I'm working with my team on some goals, you know, that we have or if it's working, you know, on a special project where I get to work with colleagues across the organization.
